BIOGRAPHIES

DAVID CROTTY

David Crotty is the Editorial Director, Journals Policy for Oxford University Press. He oversees journal policy and contributes to strategy across OUP's journals program, drives technological innovation, serves as an information officer, and manages a suite of research society-owned journals. David was previously an Executive Editor with Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory Press, creating and editing new science books and journals, and was a journal Editor in Chief. David received his PhD in Genetics from Columbia University and did developmental neuroscience research at Caltech before moving from the bench to publishing. David has been elected to and serves on the Boards of the Society for Scholarly Publishing, the STM Association, CHOR Inc., and the AAP/PSP Executive Council. As the Executive Editor of the Scholarly Kitchen blog, David regularly writes about current issues in publishing.

SCOTT DELMAN

Scott Delman has been a member of the scholarly publishing community for the past twenty-five years, having started his career as a computer science editor for Kluwer Academic Publishers and over the next decade assumed increasing levels of editorial and management responsibility, ultimately leading to his appointment as Vice President of Electronic Publishing in 2001 and Vice President of Publishing in 2002. Following Kluwer's merger with Springer Science + Business Media, Scott served as Springer's Vice President of Business Development with responsibility for developing new digital products and services and overseeing Springer's Learned Society co-publishing activities. In 2007, Scott joined the Association for Computing Machinery (ACM), where he currently serves as Director of Publications, with overall responsibility for ACM's Publications program, editorial department and Digital Library Sales & Marketing activities. In addition, Scott has taken a leadership role in shaping ACM's publications policies and editorial approach to Open Access.

Scott is an active member of the STM community through a variety of initiatives and has significant board experience. Scott has served on the CHORUS Board of Directors since its inception and has played an integral role in shaping the organization, and currently serves on CHORUS' Executive Committee as Treasurer. In addition, Scott participates on several CHORUS Board Committees, including the Nominating Committee and Revenue Working Group. In addition, Scott currently serves on the Crossref Board of Directors as a representative for ACM, is chair of CrossRef's Membership & Fees Committee, and has served as past chair of CrossRef's Nominating Committee. Scott also serves on the Publisher and Library Advisory Committee for Portico, on the Publisher Advisory Board for SIPX, and on the Board of Directors for SpatialQ, a for-profit start-up focused on the geospatial mapping market.

JOHN SACK

John Sack is the Founding Director of HighWire Press and focuses on technology and publishing futures, strategic analytics, discoverability, user research, technology innovation and the kind of thought leadership and industry-forward thinking that has defined HighWire's mission since 1995. John participates in industry forums by speaking, and by serving on STM's Future Labs, STM Technology and Standards Committee, and COUNTER's international advisory board. John was previously director of Stanford's IT services and a graduate student in English literature at Stanford, as well as an undergraduate at the University of Virginia studying English, philosophy, religion, and art history.

MATTHEW SALTER

Matthew Salter received his BSc in Chemistry and PhD in Organic Chemistry from Imperial College, University of London before moving to Tohoku University in Sendai, Japan as a Japan Society for the Promotion of Science Postdoctoral Fellow. Following a further period of research at Imperial College, Matthew worked as a Lecturer in Organic Chemistry at King's College London before serving on the staff of the University of Tokyo between 2005-2007. Matthew subsequently moved into scientific publishing joining Nature Publishing Group, where he headed up its custom arm, Macmillan Scientific Communications (MSC), as Publisher and Editor-in-Chief for the Asia-Pacific. Matthew also led the team that developed and launched the gold open access journal NPG Asia Materials. In 2013, Matthew joined IOP Publishing as Publishing Manager (later Associate Director, Journals) for the Asia-Pacific region based in its Tokyo office. He subsequently joined the American Physical Society (APS) in January 2016 as Publisher of the Physical Review portfolio of journals and a member of the APS Senior Management Team. In addition to serving on the board of CHORUS, Matthew is APS Head of House and board member for the International Association of STM Publishers.
